A WORD FOR THE SALOON.

Bishop Potter, in New York on Monday night, justified the existence of the saloon before a meeting of the Church Temperance Society in the Waldorf Astoria, He told his brother bishops and the members of the church who formed his audience that saloons were a social necessity under existing conditions, and that they provided a reasonable and legitimate place of relaxatiod for the great majority of men, who, he pointed out, could not afford to belong to clubs. Bishtp Potter warned the society that the saloon would continue to exist until something equally attractive to laboring men was substituted for it. "I may almost say that I appear here to-wight with a retainer for the saloon," said Bishop Potter. "We may anathematize it, abuse it, and deplore it, but it is a social necessity. I repeat that it is a social necessity. I am sorry if I pain some of you when I say it, but the saloon exists in New York because you and I, redeemed by the same Maser, have given no better thing in its place. There is need of relexation and diversion among the poor -r classes of the city. It is as just and as righteous a want with them as are the diversions from which you and I bave come to night or to which we shall go to morrow. The man who de-f-nds the saloon on the plea that it is the poor man's club' speaks the truth. It is placed thickly along our streets because the men who cannot afford to pay $50 to belong to a club are more numerous than the men who can. Who can wonder, in view of the hard and toilsome life, and of en uncomfortable home, of the laboring man, if after the prietors of New York hotels and restaurants when they realize the full inon Sunday. The majority of the hotel proprietors express their conviction that the legislature would not pass the law. Owners of chop houses and popular restaurants, to whom, Sunday is the busiest day of the week say they might as well close up if they cannot serve wines to their patrons. "It would be an outrage on an intelligent community," say most of them. "New York," says a prominent hotel keeper, "is a lively town, and visitors should be attracted nere. There was a time when buyers made it their habit to stay here over Sundays to enjoy themselves Now they are being driven to Chicago and other cities on account of the re strictions here. In London, and especially Paris, everything is done to make life agreeable to visitors. That is the reason why such an enormous amount of trade is done there I think Raines is a great bypocrite. He is not sincere, but only auxious for notoriety The Raines law has not decreased drunkenness one particle in this city."

MILLIONS MADE IN POLICY. Policy players all over New York are awaiting with interest the offering for probate of the will of Frederick E. Luthy, known as the "King of Poker Shops," who died on December 30 in that city. For thirty years he had been a backer of the game, and at the time of his death controlled more shops probably than any one man.

The fortune be left is variously estimated at from $2,000,000 to $6,000,000. mated at from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000.

"Fred" Luthy was sixty-six years old when he died, and he was looked up to by those who dream of wealth and squander their money in "poke" shops with the chances of winning about a thousand to one against them. Time was when Luthy was on the wrong side of the game, but it didn' take him long to discover the fact. After reaching New York from Naples and before becoming interested in policy, he made some money in New York from Naples and before becoming interested in policy, he made some money in whisky distilling, and more in running a money exchange the was well educated and a linguist. One of his old employees figured it out that each of the "King's" fifty shows notted him $200 a week-aggregating $0.00 a week, or $500 000 a year. Say he had an average of twenty shops running for the last thirty years, that would be $6,000,000.
